Websites to Practice Your Frontend Skills

 JavaScript Mastery

Frontend Mentor

 <http://frontendmentor.io>

Real-world coding challenges for web devs with a supportive community for feedback.

Codewell

 <http://codewell.cc>

Hands-on coding projects focusing on HTML, CSS, and JavaScript.

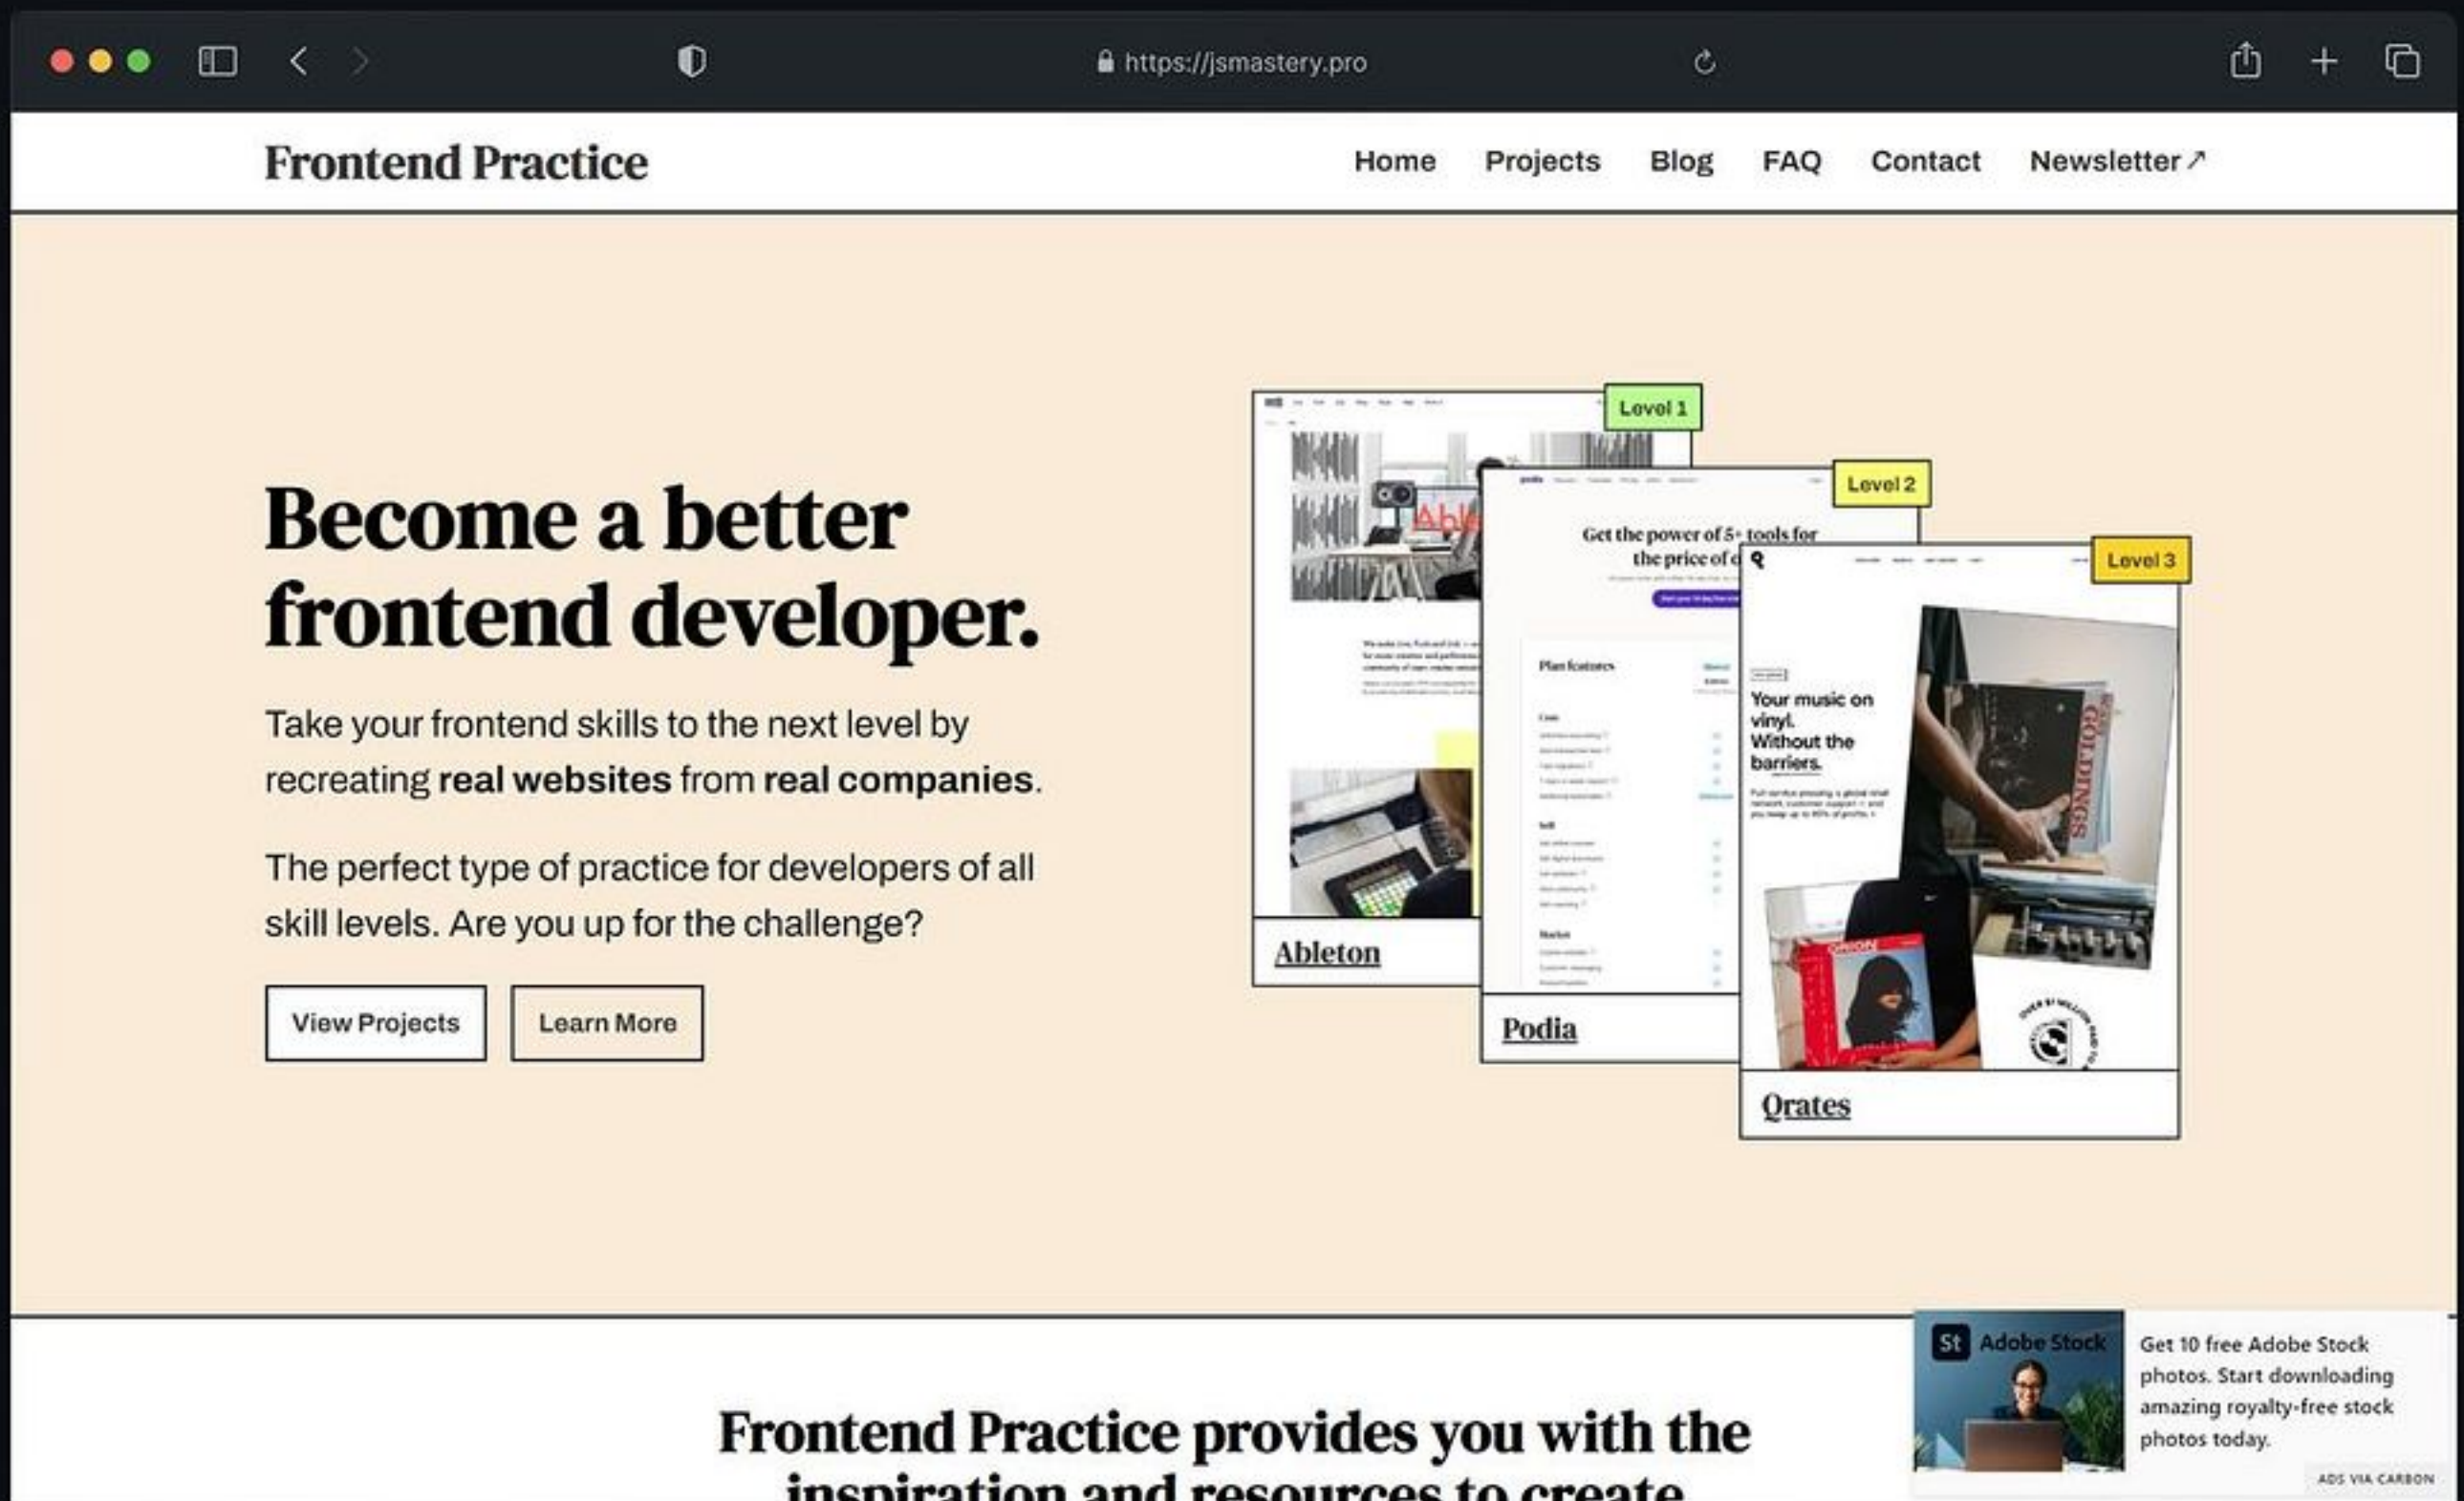

The screenshot shows the Codewell website interface. At the top, there's a navigation bar with the Codewell logo, links for 'Challenges' and 'Blog', and a 'Login with Github' button. The main content area features a large heading: 'Improve your HTML and CSS skills by practicing on real design templates.' Below this, a subheading states: 'With Codewell, you can browse high quality Figma templates that you can use to sharpen your HTML and CSS skills.' A list of three bullet points follows: '✓ New templates every week.', '✓ Access to Discord channel, even for unpaid members.', and '✓ All assets are included in all templates.' At the bottom left of this section is another 'Login with Github' button, with a hand-drawn arrow pointing to it. To the right, there's a preview of a portfolio template with the heading 'Create your portfolio in minutes.' and a subheading 'A good portfolio means good employability.' The preview shows a user interface with various icons and text.

Frontend Practice

 <http://frontendpractice.com>

Website with practical coding exercises for front-end development.

The screenshot shows the Frontend Practice website interface. At the top is a navigation bar with links: Home, Projects, Blog, FAQ, Contact, and Newsletter. The main content area has a light orange background. On the left, a large heading reads "Become a better frontend developer." followed by a subtext: "Take your frontend skills to the next level by recreating real websites from real companies." Below this is another line of text: "The perfect type of practice for developers of all skill levels. Are you up for the challenge?" Two buttons, "View Projects" and "Learn More", are positioned below the text. On the right, there is a graphic showing three overlapping website mockups labeled "Level 1", "Level 2", and "Level 3". The mockups represent websites for Ableton, Podia, and Orates. At the bottom of the page, there is a footer with the text "Frontend Practice provides you with the inspiration and resources to create" and an advertisement for Adobe Stock on the right.

CSS Stunts

New year, new #CodePenChallenge!

For more than 10 years, CodePen has been the home of Pens that really push the limits of CSS. The innovative developers in the CodePen community are constantly expanding their understanding and imagination around what CSS can do, leading to some truly mind-blowing CSS stunts.

For this month's challenge, we're going to help you build your front-end skills or flex your CSS chops by digging into the details of how those Pens that make you say "you can do THAT in CSS?" really work. And we're not just
